

Martha Papathanassiou studied Marine Sciences (B.Sc. Hons) at the University of Southampton and then completed her Master's Degree (MA) in Communications, at the University of Leeds. She worked in the UK as Editorial Coordinator for medical and scientific journals and as Press & Communications Officer for a non-profit making organisation. For the past 12 years, she has been working in Greece as the Communications Officer for EU-funded projects (FP6 SESAME & FP7 PERSEUS www.perseus-net.eu), coordinated by the Hellenic Centre for Marine Research. From 2012-2015, she was project assistant in the FP7 Sea for Society project (<http://seaforsociety.eu>), in which she facilitated citizen/youth and stakeholder consultation sessions on ocean issues. She has been a member of the European Marine Board Communications Panel since 2012 and has now been elected to be on the Panel's Steering Committee. She was an invited speaker at the EU's Atlantic Stakeholder Conference for the Workshop: 'Ocean Literacy in Europe: Recent Developments & Key Challenges' in 2012, while she was Chair of the organising Committee for the EMSEA15 (<http://www.emsea.eu>) Conference in Crete. She worked as Communications Consultant for IOC-UNESCO from September 2018 - January 2019 for 2 Large Marine Ecosystem (LME) projects and in 2018, she founded the Indigo-Med Communications Consultancy, participating in the EU ERAMUS+ Project "MATES": Maritime Alliance for Fostering European Blue Economy through a Marine Technology Skilling Strategy (www.projectmates.eu) and the newly-funded EASME "MedSkippers" project.
